

LA Escena: Los Angeles Festival of Hispanic Classical Theater

The first Los Angeles Festival of Hispanic Classical Theater presents some Hispanic classical theater plays by renowned authors, as well as contemporary adaptations for Los Angeles audience.

The comedias of the Hispanic Golden Age were plays for the people: performances took place in open-air theaters, where attendees of all classes and both sexes commingled. At the same time, the works are sophisticated urban dramas, offering pointed reflections on the constructed nature of class and gender as well as the performativity of social roles in the burgeoning city, issues that resonate with audiences today.
