

Natchez Tricentennial: Celebration of the Spanish influence

Natchez, Mississippi –one of the oldest continuous European settlements on the Mississippi River– is celebrating 300 years.

Natchez was founded on August 3, 1716 by the French at the site known as Fort Rosalie. The Spanish took control of Natchez from the British in 1779 and held it until the creation of the Mississippi Territory, as part of the US, in 1798. It was the Spanish who laid out the grid of downtown streets that is still present today. With liberal views on immigration and religion, as well as being witness to the rapid success of cotton farming, the Spanish reign of Natchez was thought of as “the golden era” for the city. To commemorate Natchez’s Spanish influence, the Tricentennial International Committee has designed an itinerary representing the Spanish influence on Natchez and surrounding lands.

The most popular opera ever written, Carmen tells the story of the downfall of Don José, a young soldier who is seduced by the sultry gypsy Carmen. In Seville, Spain in 1830, Carmen's raw, irresistible charm drives Don José to self-destruction. Abandoning his hometown sweetheart and deserting his military duties, José's world is gradually destroyed by this woman who can't be controlled by any man! Carmen's desire for the famous toreador Escamillo and a life of absolute freedom sends José into a murderous rage in the final scene. Carmen features many well-known arias such as the famous Habanera and the Toreador Song. This story of passion and fire is not to be missed.
