

New York, Just for The Brave

Curated by writer Elvira Lindo, this exhibition analyzes Manhattan from the lens of four resident Spanish photographers in the Big Apple.

Four visions of a city that demands of its inhabitants an extreme level of courage, a city that exchanges bravery for liberty, a city of pioneers. Pioneers who renew themselves in successive migrations, change the nature of the city in waves and, at the same time, keep alive its recognizable character.

What would New York be without the brave ones who inhabit it? The four participating photographers take part in this collective desire to make a space for themselves in this urban landscape. There is no city in the world that so urgently requires a spirit of conquest.
