Presented by OLA Latino Film Festival in collaboration with OLA of Eastern Long Island and with the support of the Consulate General of Spain in New York.

Like a few other great European auteurs who began working in the twentieth century, Spain's Carlos Saura has steadily worked on a film every year or two for decades. Much of his recent work has been devoted to documentaries centered on music and dance from Spain, Portugal, and Argentina (Fados; Flamenco, Flamenco), so it's not surprising that his first narrative film in almost 20 years is a musical about theatre and dance. In fact, The King of All the World is one long rehearsal, the making of a piece of music and dance told in a story about the process of creation and the highs and lows endured by its creators. Captured by cinematographer Vittorio Storaro (Apocalypse Now, The Last Emperor), some amazing, beautifully shot and lit scenes feature vibrant contemporary dance set to Mexican music by Lila Downs, Carlos Rivera, and Fela Dominguez.
