

Trío Arbos at Festival Casals of Puerto Rico

Prestigious chamber band Trío Arbos will perform with the Puerto Rican clarinetist George Morales at the famous Festival Casals of Puerto Rico.

... their sense of style and verve was just as acute in the American works. Nothing was beyond their reach—they are complete virtuosi in the highest degree, joining complete technical mastery to emotional depth—rare music making of the highest order.

— Lou Camp, Penn Sounds

Trío Arbós is one of the most important chamber bands of the Spanish music scene. Their repertoire ranges from masterpieces of classicism and romanticism to the music of our times.

This time they will perform with the Puerto Rican clarinetist George Morales, and they will feature a diverse program including music from composers such as Béla Bartók.

Founded in 1956 by famous cellist, conductor and composer Pablo Casals, the festival brings to San Juan the world's most important musical talent.
