Diego Guerrero, one of Spain's rising young Flamenco artists, presents his new album, "Vengo Caminando."

Spanish artist Diego Guerrero has always transcended Flamenco in his music. Guerrero is not only a singer, but also a multifaceted musical producer, arranger, composer and guitarist, and one of the top references in the world when it comes to the fusion of Flamenco with other genres like Afro-cuban rumba or jazz.

The unusual story of this Andalusian native began with his studies in the conservatories of Seville, Granada, and Cordoba. By day Guerrero worked on majoring in Composition and Orchestral Music, and by night, he immersed himself in the oral tradition of Flamenco, gathered around a fire with a guitar coupled with the characteristic sounds of palmas and Flamenco singing. This duality marked the birth of his daring provocations which bring Flamenco closer to other musical styles.
