

Juan Herreros at Maestros de Arquitectura Lecture

Spanish Architect Juan Herreros, principal of Estudio Herreros, presents the lecture “Maestros de Arquitectura: Global Thinking/Local Practice.”

Maestros de Arquitectura is a unique lecture series created by AIA|DC and LA.IDEA DC to recognize renowned Latin American architects for their professional accomplishments and personal journeys as Latinos succeeding in the US and around the world.

On February 6, the Maestros de Arquitectura Lecture will focus on Global Thinking & Local Practice, featuring Spanish Architect Juan Herreros. The principal of Estudio Herreros will share his 30-year professional journey, his ideas on global practice and the incorporation of interdisciplinarity and talent to both the theoretical and the professional realms of architecture.

ABOUT JUAN HERREROS

Spanish architect Juan Herreros is one of the most influential architects practicing today. He has overseen the construction of significant built projects and received international acclaim, first as a partner in the award-winning firm Ábalos&Herreros, and since 2006 as principal of estudio Herreros in Madrid. In addition, Herreros is Chair Professor of Architectural Design at the School of Architecture of Madrid (ETSAM), and is Professor of Professional Practice at GSAPP Columbia University in New York City.

He has won several important international competitions, including the design and construction of the Munch Museum and its adjacent area in Oslo; the Ágora Conference Center in Bogotá, Colombia; the Euromed Project in Marseille, France; and the ANFA District in Casablanca, Morocco.
